WORK & RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

JUSTICE INFORMATION RESOURCE NETWORK (JIRN) – Washington D.C

Research Analyst (Hybrid)

Supervisor: Susan Howley, JD

January 2024 - Present

- Utilizes extensive expertise in qualitative research and trauma-informed interviewing methods to support victim service providers in leveraging research and data on program outcomes, thereby enhancing their service delivery capabilities.
- Collaborated on outreach and engagement initiatives for various victimization and victim service projects such as iMPRoVE (Measures for Providers Responding to Victimization Experiences) and the Center for Victim Research.
- Provided technical assistance to practitioners working with victims of crime, offering guidance on best practices for data collection and for community mapping, including law enforcement agencies and advocates.
- Contributed to the development of implementation guides for state administering agencies and coalitions interested in integrating outcome measurement into their victim service programs.

- Co-developed a web-based series for gathering community data from local and national databases, including U.S. Census, My Tribal Area, and EPA Screen Mapper for practitioners in the field of victim services
- Demonstrated proficiency in grant writing, particularly on OVW-funded grants
- Cultivated collaborative partnerships with leading research organizations (e.g., RTI, Urban Institute) and national organizations dedicated to serving victims of crime.
- Hosted 5+ introductory webinars focused on outcome measurement and victim research, reaching audiences of over 500 victim service providers, state-administrative agencies and non-profit staff, facilitating knowledge exchange and capacity building within the field
- Presented at several national conferences on outcome measurement tools and trauma-informed research and evaluation practices for practitioners focused on victim services.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY – East Lansing, MI

Evaluation Assistant

August 2022 – January 2024

Departmental Justice, Equity, Diversity and Inclusion Initiative and Evaluation (J-DEI).

Department of Psychology

Supervisor(s): Ignacio Acevedo-Polchavick, Ph. D; Noel Lugo, M.A

- Designed and managed the project timeline for the J-DEI Initiative, presenting a comprehensive overview of activities and deliverables for the year.
- Assisted in the development of a grant proposal for a graduate recruitment and academic success program.
- Supported the pilot phase of a graduate recruitment and academic success program by conducting interviews with potential cohort members, organizing faculty mentorship, and designing specialized graduate training sessions.
- Contributed to the successful execution of the J-DEI initiative by conducting research, formulating survey and interview protocols, facilitating focus groups, creating presentations, and preparing award solicitations and committee position outreach materials.

Independent Researcher

August 2022 – Present

Dissertation on Black Women’s Experiences Healing from Sexual Assault, and Institutional Betrayal: A Qualitative

Exploration

Department of Psychology

Supervisor: Jasmine Engleton. M.A

- Successfully obtained a doctoral fellowship of $9000 to complete dissertation research.
- Conceptualized and led an independent research study investigating the recovery journeys of Black women who survived sexual assault and faced institutional betrayal within the criminal legal system regarding untested kits.
- Effectively presented the research to a committee of faculty members, gauging its feasibility and potential contributions to the field.
- Conducted semi-structured interviews and collected qualitative data from 29 Black female sexual assault survivors.
- Employed qualitative cluster analysis methods, such as ideal type analysis, to discern the diverse pathways through which Black women navigate healing after experiencing sexual assault and institutional betrayal by the criminal legal system.
- Conducted a thorough literature review to gain a comprehensive understanding of the factors influencing Black women's encounters with sexual victimization, their experiences within the criminal legal system, and evidence-based models for healing from sexual violence.

Independent Project Development, Undergraduate Course Development,

January 2022 – August 2022

Department of Psychology

Supervisor: Jasmine Engleton. M.A

- Developed a 15-week advanced level undergraduate course on "Sexual Violence in the Lives of Black Women and Girls."
- Integrated theoretical and empirical literature from diverse academic disciplines, including ecological-community psychology, black feminism, intersectionality theory, social work, criminal justice, sociology, and humanities, to comprehensively examine sexual violence in the lives of Black women and girls.
- Explored the perpetuation, legitimization, and maintenance of sexual violence against Black women and girls by different ecological systems within the U.S.
- Provided an insightful overview of the resistance efforts undertaken by Black women against sexual violence, emphasizing activism and academic endeavors as mechanisms of empowerment and change.
- Encouraged students to critically analyze and challenge the existing research landscape concerning violence against Black women and girls, fostering a deep understanding of the subject, and promoting proactive engagement.

COLLECTIVE ACTION FOR SAFE SPACES – Washington D.C

Transformative Justice Needs Assessment.

December 2020 – January 2022

Supervisors: Je’Kendria Trahan, Nkiru Nnawulezi, Ph.D.

Project Manager (Remote)

- Defined project scope by establishing a comprehensive timeline with outlined tasks and deliverables.
- Allocated and managed essential resources for project execution, including data transcription and qualitative data analysis software.
- Provided meticulous oversight of budgetary expenses to ensure efficient project management.
- Managed data collection and performed data cleaning for an organizational survey, assessing their readiness to implement transformative justice approaches in service delivery.
- Prepared and presented data summaries, facilitating informative meetings with executive and deputy directors.
- Led and managed a team of 8 undergraduate research assistants and community volunteers, ensuring adherence to established protocols and guidelines.
- Orchestrated the recruitment process for the needs assessment, overseeing the preparation and distribution of recruitment materials, participant identification, and interview scheduling of over 20 participants.
- Coordinated and actively contributed to the development of surveys, interview protocols, data reports, and presentation.

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY – East Lansing, MI

OVW Victim Notification Grant.

January 2019 – July 2022

Supervisor: Rebecca Campbell, Ph. D

Research Associate

- Received specialized training in trauma-informed interviewing techniques to ensure empathetic and supportive survivor interactions during the interview process.
- Worked collaboratively with community-based advocates to recruit sexual assault survivors for the project
- Conducted structured interviews with 14 sexual assault survivors with previously untested rape kits, gaining crucial insights into their victim notification experiences and recommendations for process improvement.
- Served as a lead data analyst, overseeing the cleaning, coding, and analysis of qualitative data throughout the project using Atlas.ti qualitative software.
- Conducted an extensive literature review to comprehensively understand the current landscape of research regarding sexual assault kit testing, as well as the criminal engagement needs and experiences of sexual assault survivors.
- Supported the complete write-up and dissemination of project findings by actively contributing to report writing, infographics, and independently or collaboratively authoring multiple manuscripts.
- Presented project findings at two national conferences focusing on sexual assault kit initiatives, effectively disseminating knowledge to a broader audience.

Course Instructor, PSY 317: Sexual Assault: Context, Interventions, Prevention*May 2022 – August 2022*

- Conducted regular office hours to address student concerns and inquiries related to assignments and coursework.
- Enriched the course content by offering valuable educational materials such as readings and topic areas, enhancing the learning experience.
- Assessed and graded weekly assignments and quizzes, ensuring objective evaluation and feedback to aid student progress.
- Offered constructive critique and feedback on students' writing assignments, fostering improvement in their academic performance, and writing skills.

Independent Researcher, Master Thesis on Examining Economic Abuse and Relevant Psychosocial Factors Among Unstably Housed Domestic Violence Survivors*August 2019 – November 2020*

Department of Psychology

Supervisor: Jasmine Engleton, M.A

- Formulated an independent research study examining secondary data from 300+ female survivors of domestic violence.
- Performed multivariate regression analysis to investigate the correlation between economic abuse, race, criminal record, citizenship status, and housing stability.
- Performed an in-depth literature review to gain a comprehensive understanding of domestic violence, encompassing economic abuse and its interplay with housing instability and economic insecurity.
- Successfully disseminated research outcomes by publishing findings in a peer-reviewed academic journal.

Domestic Violence Housing First Evaluation Project,*July 2018 – December 2018Supervisor: Cris Sullivan, Ph. DGraduate Research Assistant

- Transcribed qualitative data from interviews to facilitate data analysis and reporting.
- Conducted thorough cross-checks of audio-taped interviews with input data for survivor surveys, ensuring accuracy and completeness.
- Analyzed qualitative data to generate formal reports on findings from the domestic violence agencies participating in the project.
- Collaboratively developed a trauma-informed training guide to enhance interview techniques with survivors, promoting a sensitive and supportive approach.
- Co-created a qualitative training guide for proficient utilization of NVIVO software, optimizing data management and analysis processes.

UNIVERSITY OF BALTIMORE MARYLAND COUNTY, BALTIMORE, MDResearchers for Liberatory Action, Survivors Needs Assessment Project,August 2017– August 2022Supervisor: Nkiru Nnawulezi, Ph. DResearch Assistant (Remote)

- Received specialized training in trauma-informed interviewing techniques, ensuring sensitive and empathetic interactions with survivors throughout the interview process.
- Conducted phone interviews with 20 domestic violence survivors to gather critical insights and perspectives of their needs while their partners/ex-partners attended the abuser intervention program.
- Analyzed qualitative data and made substantial contributions to the development of a project codebook, optimizing data analysis processes.
- Conducted an exhaustive literature review to gain comprehensive insights into the current status of research concerning domestic violence survivors needs, abuser intervention programs and engagement with law enforcement.

- Edited and co-authored manuscripts, ensuring a high standard of written work and effective communication of research findings.
- Collaborated in the facilitation of a domestic violence survivors' advisory group, providing a platform for survivors to share experiences and insights to inform the research.
- Presented project findings at national and local university conferences.
- Co-created a short educational podcast series on the Survivors Needs Assessment research project, engaging researchers, and Baltimore community members to disseminate research insights effectively.

VOLUNTEER EXPERIENCE

MICHIGAN STATE UNIVERSITY – East Lansing, MI

Psychology Anti-Racism Organizing

June 2020 – June 2021

- Organized and facilitated multiple organizing meetings for psychology graduate students, fostering collaboration and effective communication within the community.
- Co-developed a comprehensive survey aimed at understanding the specific needs of graduate students, focusing on transparent evaluation during annual reviews and fostering mentor-mentee relationships.
- Orchestrated a successful virtual retreat, promoting engagement and collaboration among psychology graduate students while establishing meaningful connections across various psychology interest groups.

Empirical Research Reviewer

March 2019-Present

- Acted as a peer journal reviewer, assessing the quality and relevance of empirical research submissions for the Journal of Family Violence and Journal of Interpersonal Violence.
- Evaluated grant proposals submitted by graduate students for the American Psychological Association for Graduate Students, assessing the caliber and viability of proposed research projects.
